

インターン募集

東京で法律の世界を覗いてみませんか

We are offering a vacation clerkship opportunity to spend six weeks between November 2011 and February 2012 working in Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer's Tokyo office.

Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer is an international law firm operating from 27 offices in 15 countries, including all the main international financial centres. Our 2,400-plus lawyers provide unrivalled technical and commercial advice to the world's leading national and multinational corporations, financial institutions and governments, helping them deal with their most challenging and complex business issues and transactions.

The Tokyo office provides Japanese, English and US legal services on a wide range of financial, corporate and commercial matters.

We cover the following practice areas:

- antitrust and competition;
- corporate;
- dispute resolution;

- employment and labour;
- finance; and
- real estate.

The clerkship is an excellent way to gain a first-hand understanding of the opportunities available for Japanese-speaking law students in international law firms.

Eligibility is based on high Japanese-language speaking ability (JLPT level 1 or equivalent) and having between two and four semesters' study to complete. A living allowance and expenses (accommodation, flight and insurance) are provided.

Please send your CV, a cover letter, university transcripts and evidence of Japanese language proficiency to Yumiko Yamada, HR manager, at tokyohr@freshfields.com by 14 October 2011. Selected candidates will be interviewed by phone in English and Japanese in October or November 2011.
